Friday's 13th

Dust off lucky charm

By MITCHELL MEIK
Universe Staff Writer

Post. Worried about Friday the 13th? Today is Thursday the 12th, and that means...well, you know.

Don't walk under a ladder or spill the salt Friday if you're superstitious. Be sure to carry your four-leaf clover and horseshoe.

For generations, Friday has been the day of misfortune to many, yet Friday, according to Alvin Saxon, was named after Frigg, the goddess of love in Norse mythology. Why, then, is a day that had such a promising beginning now considered to be so unlucky when it falls on the 13th of the month?

Like many superstitions, Friday the 13th can trace its origin back to events that either tie with early Christian history or one of the other beliefs of that time period.

Friday is considered to be an un- lucky day because it was on a Friday that the Lord was crucified. This one thought has led to the creation of other superstitions in different cultures.

It is thought that if a garment is cut on Friday, the person for whom it is made will not live unless it is finished on the same day.

Other Friday superstitions have the same death prophecies. One is that the person who begins a quilt on Friday will never live to finish it, and another is that if a doctor is called on Friday the patient will surely die.

Provo master plan OK'd after spirited discussion

By SYBEL ALGER
Universe Staff Writer

Provo City's General Master Plan was approved Tuesday night after two hours of public debate in City Commission meeting.

Mass transit surfaced as the primary concern, taking the commission by surprise.

"We expected debate on everything but what came up tonight," said Mayor Russell Grange. "But I feel that everyone had an opportunity to speak his piece."

Nearly half of the citizens in attendance dis- covered early in the evening that their issue was not even a topic on the master plan.

Gandyview area residents received a flyer stating that the plan outlined a road which would cut through their property. Approximately 15 people appeared to protest the road, but they were informed by City Planner Jerry Howell that the road in question had been officially deleted March 30 after similar protests.

The mass transit issue was raised by represen- tatives of the handicapped and the elderly. The Master Plan made only passing mention of the need for a mass transit system, and Dean Shimmin, a member of the Association for the Advancement of Retired People (AARP), said his group wanted "action now. We don't want to see this left until ten years in the future."

Supporting his stand was Annette Weening, a volunteer with the Sheltered Workshop, a program for the handicapped. She expressed the need for a transportation system which would go directly to the home.

The commission moved to put an addendum in the plan calling for a study on mass transit, thus avoiding the delay of sending the new request back to the Planning Commission.

Also contested was the R-5 zoning in portions of the Dixon/Timp area. Neighborhood Chairman John Moore stated that the people in the neighborhood "want to keep apartments out of period." The R-5 rating is a medium-density designation, meaning that apartments would be allowed.

Commissioner J. Earl Wignall questioned whether Moore truly represented the wishes of the neighborhood. Petitions collected earlier on the issue covered a larger area than that in question in the plan. Tempers flared for a moment as Commissioner E. Odell Miner said, "You may not be sure, but I am. We have enough input to know that the people don't want apartments."

Wignall countered with, "There is still doubt in my mind." Miner replied, "Well, I am sure of it."

"As long as you are for yourself, not me," Wignall said. He pointed out that the Planning Commission had approved the plan, and it is supposed to represent the people.

Miner ended the exchange with the comment that "there seems to be a difference between what the people and the planning commission want."

The Dixon/Timp neighborhood will meet May 26 to get an official polling, after which Moore will report back to the commission. A change could then be approved before the final printing of the plan.

The commission also passed a resolution com- mending the Planning Commission, the city and the neighbors for their voluntary efforts on the Master Plan.

An ordinance restructuring inspection fees for single-family dwellings was also passed.

Soviet leaders, Cambodia focus of 2nd Nixon interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon, in his second television interview, portrays Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev as a firm and sophisticated adversary as the two superpowers pursued a mutual policy of detente.

Nixon, sources said, credits

Brezhnev with being less volatile and having a firmer grasp than his predecessor on the issues. Nixon, sources said, believes that Khrushchev, who broke up the 1960 summit meeting in Paris with a denunciation of American spy-plane reconnaissance of the Soviet Union.

Hightman's bid of $218,160 was for 18.8 acres of land. He plans to retain 18 acres for himself and sell the remaining 10 to another car dealer.

According to Orem City Manager Al Haines, negotiations with Heathman have been delayed over the issue of interest payments on money to be paid to the city.

The City Council voted Tuesday to purchase the land for two weeks to purchase the property. If not bought by then, the city will rebid the property to other car dealers.

Contested Wednesday, Heathman said he was still discussing details of the land purchase with the city.

Orem City officials have said they particularly encourage this type of commercial development because it is nonpolluting and at the same time creates jobs and adds tax revenues.

The location is desirable for automobile dealers, Haines said, because of the proximity to Interstate 15 and the traffic funnelled from the freeway to the University Mall and BYU.

The site is situated so it is visible from both directions to motorists on the freeway.

Nixon found Khrushchev to be impulsive — in contrast to Brezhnev — particularly in contrast to Brezhnev — particularly in contrast to the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It was at the abortive summit that Khrushchev submarine Eisenhower's plan to have Nixon take over for him, saying that would be "to leave the cab."

Khrushchev offered his appraisal of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, as well as the two Soviet leaders, and emphasizes that he himself originated the attempted reconciliation with Communist China.

While lacking the emotional impact of Watergate, the sole topic of last week's program, the second Nixon show was considered sufficiently attractive to viewers to cause President Carter to move up his own news conference on his first overseas trip from 5:30 p.m. to 12:30 p.m. MDT.

Surveying his foreign policy over 5.5 years, Nixon stresses his own stewardship of the effort to lessen tensions with Russia and to open ties to China after a quarter-century.

In reviewing the controversial U.S. incursion into Cambodia in 1970, Nixon described Kissinger as having reservations about the domestic impact but fully supporting the decision since it was taken.

Later, after student protests at Kent State and other universities, Nixon said Kissinger wanted to cut the U.S. operations in Cambodia short. But Nixon, the sources said, took the position that dissent was a natural consequence and it was his decision to maintain the war there until 1973.

Deadlines approach for drop, registration

Elder Young married Hulda Parker in January of 1965.

He was called to be president of the New England Mission from 1947 to 1961. He has also been very active in scouting, serving for 22 years as an executive of the Ogden Area Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Author of several books, many of which are directed to young people, Elder Young has written a biography of Brigham Young, a poem about the Prophet Joseph Smith and has had numerous articles published.

Monday is the final day to drop spring term classes, and Friday is the last day of first priority registration for summer term.

A $3 fee is assessed for every class dropped by Monday. No class may be dropped after that date, according to Assistant Registrar Douglas J. Bell.

The final registration deadline for the summer term will be May 27. Tuition is due June 20 and the first day of classes will be June 28.

Elder Pinegar: Learn about self to know Christ

By BOB HAMM
University Staff Writer

Developing a strong relationship with Jesus Christ requires a person to know who they are, according to Tuesday's devotional speaker.

Elder Rex D. Pinegar, member of the First Quorum of Seventy of the LDS Church said, "We shall see Christ as He really is. Then we shall see ourselves as we truly are; as being related to Him, as His brothers and sisters."

Elder Pinegar related an experience he had recently when his daughter was born. "I saw her as a grown woman with great potential," he said.

"The potential that she has is to realize who she really is: a daughter of our Heavenly Father, a sister to Christ." He said he recognized his responsibility of helping her realize that potential.

"The best thing I can do is develop a relationship with Christ and share it with others," he said.

"Most of our questions deal with the future; who will I marry, will he or she be worthy, where will I go on my mission?" Elder Pinegar said. People should instead turn the question around and ask what should be done to prepare for this event?

Being a good listener is an attribute of Christ that all should develop said Elder Pinegar. "We should listen to the pleadings of the heart," he said.

He quoted John 3:1-3 as the place to discover our relationship with Christ. "We shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He really is, the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, the great I Am."

After realizing our relationship to Christ, Elder Pinegar said, it would be "great to see our relationship to our Heavenly Father. That we are His children."

"Knowing this, a better relationship can be developed with Him now," he said, "Knowing that we really are His offspring should affect how we pray."

Elder Pinegar said realizing that relationship to Heavenly Father had changed his life significantly, especially as it pertained to prayer.

"As I kneel in prayer I know that I am talking to a real person, someone who cares and knows my inner thoughts and feelings," he said.

"I am talking to a real person, someone who cares and knows my inner thoughts and feelings," he said.

"Lord," he continued, "Nothing will bring you more happiness than knowing that what you are doing is correct," he said.

Elder Pinegar said it is essential to forgive others in order to gain forgiveness for ourselves. He cited D&C 64:8-11 as the guide for characteristics of forgiveness.

Glass smashing spree still under close study

Provo police are still investigating two vandalism incidents which destroyed $10,000 of window glass in cars parked on Provo streets.

On May 3 and 4, vandals operating from a vehicle, destroyed the window glass in 150 cars, according to Lt. Bud Gillman, Provo city detective.

Gillman said the investigation so far had not shown destruction to be directed at any particular party.

"It's more a case of availability and not directed to any one person," Gillman said.

"Somebody's got a poor sense of humor," said Al Runolfson, truck and fleet manager for Harry Heathman Inc., a Provo auto dealer. Runolfson said that in two nights, $1,000 worth of windows in eight cars at the Heathman dealership were broken.

Presently, Gillman says a 50-50 chance exists of resolving the crime and making arrests.

"We're starting to get some cooperation now that I feel good about, and in a week, it should pay off," he said.

According to a new Utah law that went into effect Tuesday, parents can be held liable for up to $1,000 in acts of vandalism committed by their children.

Since these incidents occurred before the law went into effect, anyone arrested will be charged with criminal mischief, according to Gillman.

Under the old law, a judge is allowed to declare restitution, but parents are not held legally liable for acts of vandalism committed by their children.

Tel Aviv — An Israeli military helicopter crashed and exploded in the Tel Aviv port area, killing all 54 servicemen aboard in what others said, Wednesday, was Israel's worst air disaster.

Israel's chief of staff said that while the cause had not been pinpointed, an inquiry committee had ruled out the possibility of foul play.

ACLU combats abortion law

Salt Lake City — A class action suit has been filed in U.S. District Court in an attempt to stop enforcement of a new Utah law regulating state money for abortion, the Utah Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said.

The new law provides that the State Department of Social Services shall not spend state money for abortions except when the life or health of the mother is in danger.

Victim, would-be rescuer shot

Salt Lake City — A 67-year-old man was shot to death and a young woman was critically wounded when the man tried to intervene as she was being attacked by another man in Mill Creek Canyon, authorities said.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Capt. Pete Hayward identified the dead man as Justin E. Tauffer, and the woman as Karen Roberson of Salt Lake City.

Meeting for women Friday will focus on current issues

A meeting to discuss issues relevant to women today will be held at 7 p.m. Friday in the Provo High School lunchroom.

According to Mrs. Loneta Murphy, co-chairwoman for the Provo meeting, all women 16 years and older are encouraged to attend.

The women will be discussing problems concerning their lives and the Provo area including such topics as ERA, employment, education and politics.

Mrs. Murphy said, "Women need an arena from which to express themselves, and this is why the meeting is important. It is an opportunity to say what they feel."

Ideas will be taken from the meeting in preparation for the State Women's Conference on June 24 and 25 in Salt Lake City, she said.

Mrs. Murphy said they want to involve women of all ages including students, homemakers and professional women.

We do want a good representation at the meeting and we would especially like to see those who aren't affiliated with another organization and don't have a chance to voice their ideas," Mrs. Murphy said.

BYU Pres. Dallin Oaks issued a memorandum Wednesday pointing out that BYU and the LDS Church do not wish to be represented at the meetings as institutions. But he encouraged individual employees to attend the meetings and express personal views on the items to be discussed.

"It seems vital," Pres. Oaks' memo said, "that the unique interests of Saintes perspective with regard to current women's issues be vigorously represented both in Salt Lake City and elsewhere."

He encouraged BYU personnel—particularly women—to participate in one or more of the local meetings and to express personal viewpoints strongly so any resolutions coming out of the meetings would reflect those views.

In urging BYU women to attend, Karen Bybee, Women's Office vice-president said, "I feel that women should attend these meetings to become aware of what women are working for on a national, state and local level and to learn what our ideals, standards and values are represented."

Other area meetings will be held at 7:30 p.m. next Thursday at Orem High School and Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Spanish Fork High School.

Mrs. Murphy will be on KFTN radio today at 9 a.m. to give more detail concerning the meeting. Anyone wanting more information should call Mrs. Murphy at 377-9639.

Students interested in helping with the conference are asked to contact Miss Bybee in 432 ELWC.

Summer groups to 'flood' Y

By BOB MELDRUM

University Staff Writer

In 27,000 pre-college youth will flood the summer, participating in activities at BYU.

The youngsters won't appear all at once, but pick up snatches of their conversations ranging from basketball to broadcast medicine to pottery.

One of such summer activities is the Department of Special Courses and Conferences.

According to Dr. Philip D. Harris, chairman of the department, more than 600 programs are available to youth as well as those university, commercial and professional people who desire to share their skills in all phases of learning. While many of the programs will begin in a few weeks, the department is currently offering adult workshops in medical training, survival film, folk lore, beginning languages and so on.

"The department was created to satisfy the needs and desires of many different ages and from many different background groups."

Inception in 1949, Special Courses and Conferences has become one of the most active parts of the Division of Continuing Education. BYU is one of the largest divisions of continuing education in the nation, with nearly 350,000 students annually.

Offering workshops in athletics and recreation, Special Courses and Conferences offers workshops in all phases of personal development; insight control and self-confidence building are some of the highlights for youth this summer. DS youth conferences, pioneer handcraft various workshops and academies are offered by the department.

To Dr. Harris, the specific objective of the department is to utilize the intellectual, physical and social talents of the church to meet the spiritual and material needs of as many people as possible.

Over 5,000 people are expected to enroll in the and generate enough revenue to meet operating and production costs of the programs as well as overhead.

We receive some benefits from the university, but all expenses must be met by monies coming from tuition. No tithing funds of the church are used to help us carry out these programs."

Ideas for the programs originated by Special

Courses and Conferences come either from the staff itself or from university personnel or community members. However, federal law insists that such programs be used for educational purposes only.

With a large program to administer, Dr.

Harris has seven additional full-time administrators and 10 full-time secretaries. In addition, there are part-time secretaries and conference assistants and two graphic artists.

The staff of Special Courses and Conferences has been well received by the DS youth conference participants.

Dr. Harris said planning must begin one year in advance of each program to insure that it will be a successful and worthwhile addition to the conference schedule. "Each program we plan must also be dependent upon itself for revenue," he said. "Each

New Y museum halfway finished

By WILL FRIDEN
University Staff Writer

The Monte L. Bean Life Sciences Museum, which will house more than one million items, is more than halfway completed.

According to Museum Director Dr. Wilmer Tanner, the museum's projected completion date is Nov. 1. The building, located just east of the Marriott Center, will have approximately 40,000 square feet of storage and display area.

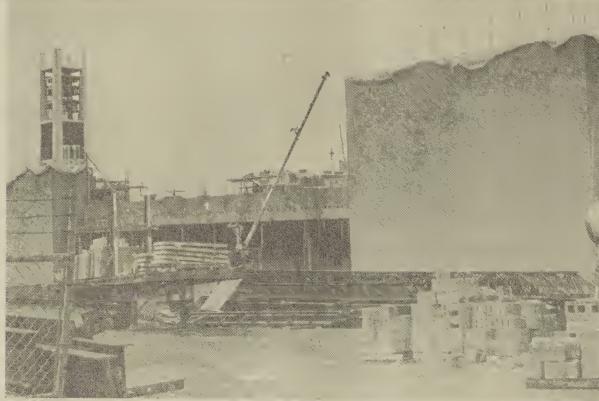

The new museum is named after a Seattle businessman who died last year for place to display his collection of wildlife trophies. Dr. Tanner said approximately 80 of Monte L. Bean's personal game trophies will be housed in the museum. His trophies were collected from India, North America and Africa.

Included with Bean's trophies, the museum will house more than one million specimens. More than 80 percent of these will be insects. The variety of specimens will include mammals, birds, eggs, reptiles, fish, insects and plant life.

Dr. Donald M. Allred, professor of zoology, and Dr. Joseph R. Murdock, professor of botany and range science, will assist Dr. Tanner in directing the affairs of the museum. Dr. Allred will coordinate the exhibits and work with the budget. Dr. Murdock is the liaison between the contractor and museum staff and is supervising the exhibit construction.

The museum will be used for different purposes. "As well as being a public exhibit the museum will be a center for education and research," said Dr. Tanner.

On the storage of the specimens Dr. Tanner remarked, "Some of the materials to be exhibited are not yet on campus. They are being retained by donors until the building (museum) is completed."

When completed in November, the Monte L. Bean Life Sciences Museum will house a million items including game trophies collected by the man for whom the building is named.

Job hunters find help at Placement

Students who go through the Placement Center have a better chance of finding a job than those who don't.

According to R. Wayne Hansen, director of the Placement Center, between 3,500 and 4,000 students take advantage of the variety of services offered by the Placement Office. Most of the students who use the Placement Center are there just to get ideas or to look at our listings," said Hansen.

Said Hansen, "When all of our graduates were required to go through commencement we were able to find out what they were doing after graduation. When they came to pick up their crowns we would ask them, 'But now since they aren't required to go through commencement it is hard to really tell what they are doing or if they actually got the jobs that they applied for.'

good chance of finding a job. Hansen said, Their chances improve depending upon their major, how flexible they are in what geographical area they want to live in, their academic record and experience.

According to Hansen, the Placement Center offers students help in preparing themselves with the skills needed to look for jobs while at the same time offering listings of jobs available.

Taiwanese university offers study program

The National Chengchi University will sponsor a seminar on Chinese Studies in Taiwan June 25-July 31.

Fifty applicants from the United States will be selected for the month-long study abroad program, according to Paul Hyer, a professor of Asian Studies at BYU. An round-trip air fare plus international travel in Taiwan will be provided for the U.S. students, Dr. Hyer said. The only financial obligation to the student will be to meet the expenses of a round trip fare of $520 on a charter flight.

The seminar will include lectures on Chinese culture, history, economic and political processes as well as travel in Taiwan. Participants will be the guests of the China Youth Corps, Dr. Hyer said.

Interested students should contact the Asian Studies Office, 121 FOB, ext. 3377, for institutional endorsement, but at the same time should personally apply to David Liu, Republic of China Educational and Cultural Service, 391 Sutter St., San Francisco, Calif. 94108, Dr. Hyer said.

One of the labs is a graphics lab, one is a woodworking shop and the other is an audiovisual equipment lab. The graphics lab is open to everyone, but the other two are mainly for the use of education students, he said.

The lab staff is trained in the use of media equipment and members in the labs to give assistance and provide materials, Brown said.

Hobby shop

"We try not to be a hobby shop. We are not in competition with the Wilkinson Center. Our emphasis is on preparation of instructional materials for school and church," Brown said.

"We try to foster creativity in our students and encourage them to try as many different patterns as possible," he said. "We want them to learn to make school fun for children and to do things in ways that will attract and please the eye of their audience."

Married couples' meeting to discuss public education

The Married Students Organization will be meeting 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Wyview Park Central Building, according to Darlene Moore, publicity chairman.

The meeting is being held to discuss public education for children and Mrs. Moore. Children are welcome. The Wyview Park Central Building is located at 1999 N. University Avenue.

The Married Students Organization was formed by married students of BYU to help meet the needs of these students and their families. Mrs. Moore said it is trying to make the married BYU students more aware and involved in the community, by helping to upgrade the public education for children in Provo by working with the school administration and the PTA.

The organization, headed by Don Wrye, also is concerned with improving the health care for the spouses and children of BYU students.

Some of the programs they are promoting are get well clinics and improved health insurance coverage, said Mrs. Moore.

'Pay for phone calls,' Pres. Oaks counsels

According to a Mountain Bell spokesman, there are a number of BYU students making long distance "code calls."

Clifford Finch, customer services manager for the metropolitan area, said that as each semester changes, the number of students placing "code calls" is alarmingly.

Code calling is when a person places a collect or person-to-person call for himself to convey a pre-arranged message, such as "I have arrived safely at my destination," following a trip. According to Finch, this particular practice is common among students.

The parents answer the call and explain to the operator that the person for whom the call was intended is not at home. Meanwhile, the message gets through without being paid for.

Dallin Oaks, BYU president, came out strongly against such unethical and illegal practices in a devotional address Jan. 30, 1973. He said that it is dishonest to use the telephone to send messages that don't result in fair charges on a person's telephone bill. When a person evades payment for phone messages, he is stealing from the company, he said.

Mountain Wheelchair games, take time out to display medals they have won in athletic competition.

Two wheelchair athletes search for sponsorship

Still proudly displaying medals they won last week in the Rocky Mountain Regional Wheelchair Games, two BYU athletes, who lost their legs in separate accidents, are looking forward to the Pacific Coast Games in San Diego on May 19-22.

Curt Brinkman and Mike Johnson, both of whom set regional records in the games at Boston, Colo., are seeking sponsors to send them to the San Diego competition and to the national meet of the Wheelchair Athletic Association in San Jose, Calif., June 16-19.

"Although we are both record holders in our divisions, we hope to qualify in San Diego for additional events and to eliminate some of our competition for the national games," Johnson explained.

In the Colorado contests Brinkman won two gold medals, a silver, and a bronze in class 5. Johnson took five gold medals and a silver in class 4. Wheelchair athletes are classified for competition according to their degree of disability.

Brinkman won the silver in the discus, bronze in weight-lifting, gold in the 100-yard dash with a record of 18.9 seconds, and gold in the mile with a record of 6:08. Johnson set a record in the 100-yard dash in 19 seconds flat, wheeled the 880-yard run in 3:04.9, set a national record of 87 ft. 7 in. in the javelin, won first in table tennis and the slalom, and a silver medal in the 50-yard freestyle swim.

These courageous athletes also won seven medals in the Para-Olympiad which was held in Toronto, Canada, last August. Curt took the gold in 100 meters with a new record, bronze medals in lawn bowling and discus, and fourth in the shotput.

Mike garnered the gold in table tennis and lawn bowling, silver in the 100-meter dash, and bronze in the javelin.

Last month Curt competed in the Boston Marathon, traversing the 26-mile course in 2 hours, 43 minutes and 25 seconds for a second-place finish.

"We compete not only for ourselves, but also to help other fellow wheelchairers who might be discouraged," Johnson said. "If we can get them interested in some competition, we know that it will turn their lives around, as it did with us."

Brinkman added that there is a tendency for the handicapped to stay at home and become depressed. "Maybe our example will help to get them out of the house, to socialize, to compete, and to cope with life," he said.

Both men are senior students at BYU and are married. Johnson has two sons, Andrew and Mrs. Brinkman are expecting their first child. Andrew Johnson is majoring in health science and coaching, and Brinkman is a psychology major.

Johnson, 28 and a native of Huntington W. Va., was nearly killed by an artillery booby trap explosion near Da Nang, Vietnam, in 1967, losing both legs, the thumb and two fingers on his left hand and middle finger of his right hand. A day later in a nearby hospital he was hidden under a bed and covered with a mattress as communist troops overran the area.

Brinkman, 22 from Shelley, Idaho, was a strapping 6-7 farmboy six years ago when he worked summers on a ranch, operating irrigation sprinkling systems. He brushed a 12,000-volt line on a power pole, fell 25 feet, and the seriousness of his injuries resulted in the loss of both legs.

Batcats try for record wins

The Cougar baseball team travels to Wyoming this weekend with a chance to end regular season play as the winningest BYU squad ever.

The Cougars, need only to notch one more win to tie the previous best mark of 33-15 set in 1972 and two wins to earn the distinction of being the winningest BYU baseball team in history.

BYU and Wyoming will square off for a doubleheader Friday beginning at 1 p.m. and tangle at 11:30 a.m. Saturday in a single game. KBYU-FM will broadcast the second game, and KBYU-TV at 3 p.m. and Saturday's tilt live from Laramie.

Except for the won-loss record, the three-game series with Wyoming holds little other significance for the Cougars. BYU wrapped up its 11th straight WAC northern division title by besting Colorado State 7-2 in the first game of a twin bill last Friday at Cougar Field. BYU beat the Rams in the last game of the doubleheader before dropping Saturday's contest. The series left the Cougars with a 13-2 ledger in WAC play.

Fishing season opens Saturday, Y students advised to obey rules

By Dee Thompson
University Sports Writer

Utah fishing season will open Sunday and continue through June 1977. The season is opening two weeks early because of the Ware, regional supervisor for Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, said a license will be required for all persons fishing in the cost for a resident fishing for the season is $8 for adults and $3 for children. A one-day non-resident license can also be purchased and a five-day license for $7.50. According to the Utah Wildlife Code, BYU students can be residents providing that they are attending BYU as a full-time student and are not claiming residency in another state and if they are physically present in Utah for 60 consecutive days.

In Shirley, information officer, the Division of Wildlife Resources is once again sponsoring a non-information meeting concerning the 1977 general fishing. All interested anglers should attend. The meeting will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the Provo City Utilities

OPINION—COMMENT

Brigham Young University

Return of Watergate: do we really need it?

Watergate. A national scandal that surprised, shocked, and disgusted the American people has been needlessly rethrust into the public eye as an annoying irritant.

Any hope for new insights into former President Richard M. Nixon's involvement in the bugging and burglary of the National Democratic Convention Headquarters has been lost as Nixon continues his denial of any wrongdoing in the Watergate cover-up.

"I let the American people down, and I have to carry that burden with me for the rest of my life," Nixon told British interviewer David Frost. But "technically I did not commit a crime, an impeachable offense," he insisted.

But what good can reopening a slowly healing wound do for a country already burdened by rising energy costs, droughts and shaky foreign relations?

Public opinion

Recent news reports show that the first of three taped interviews between Frost and Nixon has done little if anything to change the public's opinion of Nixon. His opponents remain firmly opposed while his friends seem to be only reinforced in their belief of his innocence.

UPI quotes former Sen. Sam Ervin Jr., chairman of the senate Watergate committee, saying of Nixon, "He's still covering up." A Salt Lake television station soliciting downtown viewer reaction received statements like "Why do they have to bring this up again?" and "Can't they leave the poor man alone?"

But there seems to be more to the revival than just a lot of vindictive individuals looking to destroy a public nuisance. Nixon certainly didn't have to submit to the type of grilling he did on such an unpleasant topic. And the idea that he was to make it up to the American people has already been proved wrong.

Profit sharing?

One could easily imagine an eager hand reaching out to share the profits available through the exploitation of the whole mess. Heretofore the spoils from best-selling books and movies have gone only to the opposition. One editorial cartoon shows Nixon with dollar signs in his eyes and money in his fists claiming, "I couldn't have committed a crime. Crime doesn't pay."

But whatever the reason for its return, Watergate must necessarily have lost some of its intrigue through its latest manhandling.

What about the remaining two interviews? If Frost expects to retain viewership of his series after a rather disappointing beginning, he may be sadly mistaken. But more, if Nixon hopes to be remembered in history for his accomplishments in office and for his foreign policy, he may very well again have to say, "I botched it."

Students aid selves, others in volunteer ASBYU jobs

The officers of the Associated Students of BYU and the students who work with them are obtaining valuable service experiences which are of benefit not only to themselves, but also to the recipients of those services.

Several hundred students work with the leaders of the various student offices each year. In doing so, an almost identical amount of work is accomplished, most of it by volunteers. For example, in the ASBYU Ombudsman's Office, two administrative assistants are appointed. Volunteers serve as media director, executive secretary, director of legal services, director of consumer services and director of university services. The latter three directors have three advisers each.

These students who volunteer their time, of course, learn many things in their work. They also get to mention the work on their transcripts. But those most benefited are certainly their fellow students, whose problems as consumers they help solve.

Another case in point is the Social Office. This office often organizes concerts and other activities such as the Gallery and student dances. The many students who volunteer their time on almost a full-time basis of course learn much. But those who benefit most are the Associated Students of BYU.

The Mormon Arts Ball is under the direction of a volunteer worker in the Culture Office. The ASBYU court system is mainly staffed by volunteers. The ASBYU Women's Conference presented many lectures and the Women's Conference this year as well as performing many other services, is headed by the Women's vice president, but staffed mainly by volunteers under her direction. The other student offices, also staffed mainly by volunteers, provide valuable services to students.

The Student Community Services office provides students with opportunities to give service to people in the community. Programs such as "You've Got a Friend," "Senior Citizens," "Sharelove," "Sub for Santa" and others are all directed by student volunteers under the direction of the vice president of Student Community Services. These programs give extremely valuable help to people of the community as well as to the students who participate in them.

Each officer and student who works in the many programs sponsored by the ASBYU government receives many personal benefits from his work. But instead of envously berating them for mistakes or occasional immaturities, BYU students should get involved in the programs or simply be grateful for the many volunteer hours put in for their benefit.

Universe editorial writer

OF COURSE, I SEE THE WISDOM OF YOUR CONSERVATION PLAN, SENATOR. IT'S JUST THAT I'M NOT SURE OF THE PRACTICALITY OF LEGISLATING MORE DOWNSHILL STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

Editor:
It seems tragic than in a drought year it is necessary to remind people to save water. In Cache, water rationing is a common occurrence. Many wells are going dry and farmers bankrupt. Utah will soon be going through these same problems.

The purpose of this letter is not to condemn or criticize, but to make those in authority aware of the problem. In the past few weeks I have seen BYU Grounds Department personnel waste several hundred gallons of water by carelessness. Sprinklers turn on in the middle of the grass, but include sidewalks and buildings. I am sorry to say, but no matter how hard you try, grass will not grow on buildings or sidewalks. When it is raining, it is difficult enough to stay dry between classes without the added help of the sprinkler system. Besides, most people take showers before they leave home. It is nice to get your clothes dry in the sun by the Helman Hills fields on a windy summer day.

Grounds department, you are doing an excellent job of keeping our campus beautiful, but please watch your watering. The water you waste today may be the water you will need tomorrow.

Editor:

As a former student returning to BYU after an extended absence, I was unaware of the debate over the campus swimming suits until reading an article in the May 5 issue of the Universe. Though I realize this comment is a bit late, I still think it is worth noting.

Many semesters ago, an engaged roommate of mine reported what I felt was a disturbing incident in the PE 360 class, "Achieving Success in Marriage." In front of the entire class, her instructor told the men that "if you want to find out just what your fiancee has, take her swimming in the PE building. Those bathing suits leave no

Versatility, strength mark ASBYU offices

The strength of the ASBYU President and Vice President's Offices is their versatility, according to two former vice presidents and an activities adviser.

The offices have few limitations with respect to student activities, but are restricted from becoming involved in administrative-level university decisions.

Former ASBYU vice presidents Clark Richter and Robert Stevenson, and activities adviser Mike Whitaker said a major advantage of the President's Office is in the great flexibility the office has to carry out its own programs.

The president and vice president are free to pursue the programs they want, said Whitaker. What they do simply depends on what the individual officers want.

Stevenson said he thought the office is more flexible than any of the other offices in student government because all the others are locked into programs and are forced to carry them from year to year. But the President's Office is free to determine its own programs.

He said the office does have some specific responsibilities, including filling up appropriate committee and court positions (such as the president's job and other appointed positions), but said the office "doesn't have a defined job." The result, he said, is the office has more freedom to pursue student interests the other offices do not have time for.

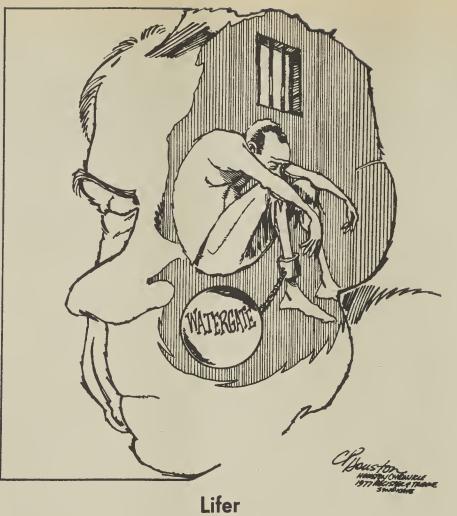

Stevenson did say he felt very limited, however, in what he could and could not pursue.

"All we can do is make recommendations to the administration," he said. "It's their decision whether or not even to consider the data."

He said he and former ASBYU Pres. Randy Sloat had attempted several projects to which the administration put a stop including the publication of "The Voice" from the ASBYU.

"Most of the time the board was undefined," he said. "We don't know when we're out of bounds until we're there. We have no real decision making-power."

Middle-of-road patriotism advocated for Y students

Middle-of-road patriotism advocated for Y students

Each morning and each evening, a race begins on the grounds of Brigham Young University.

No, it's not an NCAA track meet, nor is it the track and field team working out.

It's not even a coed trying to get in shape for tonight's date.

It's a race with the ROTC.

By long-standing tradition, each morning after leaving the BYU ROTC, cadets raise the nation's colors over the campus, and everyone stands still while the national anthem is being played.

But there is a certain minority on the campus that races to the building nearest to it at the sound of the first note of the Star Spangled Banner, there to evade the watchful eye of fellow classmates as they pay their respects to their country by standing at a vending machine.

Then, there are the die-hards who stop their cars in the middle of a parking lot, roll down their window and pay homage to our flag while making themselves as immobile as the concrete they seem to have as a brain.

Surely, there must be a middle-of-the-road approach, neither to one extreme nor the other, but right where we should be.

This nation is a nation ordained by God for a special purpose, that purpose being the restoration of the gospel unto all mankind.

Still, we must understand the principles of not being able to stop and pay homage to our flag in the middle of a busy street. So would our country's forefathers, who had the foresight not only to create a nation, but to create laws, like traffic laws, to govern the nation's development.

If all chose a middle-of-the-road path, perhaps by the dawn's early light we could see the star-spangled field of blue of our country's flag, not a stream of racers or super-patriots.

'Masks of anonymity' create poor excuse for Y hypocrisy

All too often, we are not what we seem. We do things around strangers that we wouldn't think of doing around people we want to impress or who impress us. Some individuals who seem so nice and pleasant to some become more pleasant to others once they put on their "masks of anonymity."

The coed who almost ran you off the road because you were taking a left turn too slow for her is the same one who was unusually patient a few days later with another driver making a left-turn. That driver happened to be her Relief Society president.

The couple who innocently laid on a lawn kissing last night had no regard for the passersby who might have been embarrassed or disgusted by their suggestive position or lack of concern displaying something deeply personal. Certainly they couldn't have returned to their apartments to do it, for they couldn't display their affection in front of people they knew!

The hypocrisy we exhibit at BYU is blown out of proportion because of the lives people try to lead. We have an obligation, then, to make sure that we act toward every person the same way. And that should always be in good taste and courtesy.

Water conservation, swimsuits

How we act when we put on that mask, which allows us to do what we really want without fear of retribution, determines whether or not we are hypocrites. Do we act differently before we know who we are? Do we act differently than we do before strangers? Do we assume that just because we don't know them, we can't offend them? Or that because they don't know us, they don't care what they see us do?

The hypocrisy naturally exists everywhere, but is more noticeable at BYU than at many other places.

Because we are toldwards we teach, we cannot afford to "slip up" and be hypocritical and still be effective lights to the world.

The hypocrisy we exhibit at BYU is blown out of proportion because of the lives people try to lead. We have an obligation, then, to make sure that we act toward every person the same way. And that should always be in good taste and courtesy.

you try, grass will not grow on buildings or sidewalks. When it is raining, it is difficult enough to stay dry between classes without the added help of the sprinkler system. Besides, most people take showers before they leave home. It is nice to get your clothes dry in the sun by the Helman Hills fields on a windy summer day.

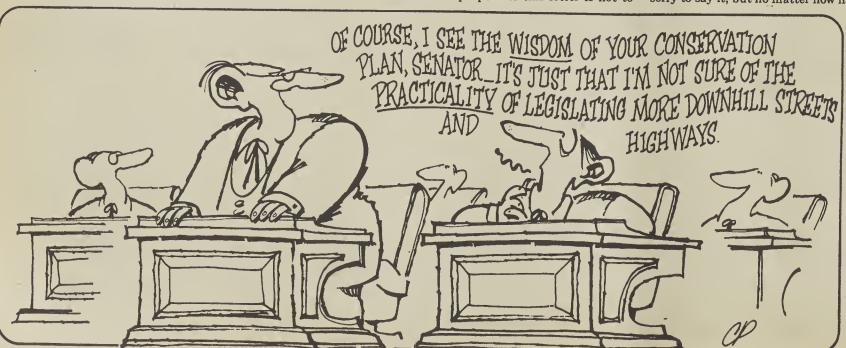

Grounds department, you are doing an excellent job of keeping our campus beautiful, but please watch your watering. The water you waste today may be the water you will need tomorrow.

As a former student returning to BYU after an extended absence, I was unaware of the debate over the campus swimming suits until reading an article in the May 5 issue of the Universe. Though I realize this comment is a bit late, I still think it is worth noting.

Many semesters ago, an engaged roommate of mine reported what I felt was a disturbing incident in the PE 360 class, "Achieving Success in Marriage." In front of the entire class, her instructor told the men that "if you want to find out just what your fiancee has, take her swimming in the PE building. Those bathing suits leave no

In contrast, former Pres. Clark Richter said very few limitations did his student government. "I think project we couldn't carry on."

He said he felt only the strength of the office would supply services to students programs or student bodies could not, but set upon the student body what he thought was not come due to the "theoretical" project he said. "Otherwise they would be ineffective in promoting projects for the students."

Activist adviser Mike Whitaker said he thought the little student government was free to pursue their own goals as far as they were willing. Otherwise they would be ineffective to the administration."

He said student government "steer clear of things to faculty and administration."

But the students do have some influence policies which affect student government. He said the student body speaks for the university unless it is authorized by the university and he could not "create a committee to a particular interest."

He said he had not seen a student body president have been cautious about something. Most students have been able to please.

The student body president stands as a symbol of the student government is affected by it. By the over 180,000 people will be affected by the Social Offi

President Carter, with the stroke of the pardoning pen, cut the 20-year sentence of G. Gordon Liddy, planner of the Watergate burglary, to eight years. Liddy will have served 50 months in prison on July 9, more time than any other of the 68 persons convicted in Watergate-related crimes.

Liddy was responsible for the planning, supervising and bottching of the burglary and bugging of the National Democratic Headquarters located in the Watergate office building in Washington, D.C.

Liddy drew a stiffer sentence than the rest of President Nixon's men because he refused to cooperate with prosecution. He got 50 months before trial, and 18 months in prison for stomping on the Watergate grand jury. He invited and received a congressional contempt citation for refusing to take an oath.

Liddy first applied for a reduced sentence to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, but was denied his release. Sirica refused, however, saying, "This defendant has no right to a right to a right to a right or regret for his actions and he has not given the court even a hint of contrition or sorrow, nor has he made any attempt to compensate for his illegal actions by trying to aid our system of justice in its search for truth."

Bob Woodward's and Carl Bernstein's book, "All the President's Men," Liddy is described as their secret source. Deep Throat, as being a man who is adept at "not mind."

Deep Throat describes an incident when Liddy held his hand over a candle, allowing the flame to burn his

Why should anyone who has committed a crime, be it a minor or a major, be released? Liddy was accused of being a participant in one of the nation's most unbelievable crimes.

It is to be hoped that President Carter realizes the ramifications of sentencing of Liddy. His sentence will affect the judicial system of the Un

Besides being disappointed obvious sexist bias (which BYU anyway), I was unhappy with the swimwear that would insist to wear something which caused reactions. I have heard similar stories many times over the years, and since it is apparent that this is going to change that those who are willing to undergo such degradation will continue to be the brunt of such remarks.

Personally, I wait to go somewhere where I can wear a bikini of which I am not embarrassed.
